The Vault

iFT Approach to Proprietary Trading

INITIAL TRAINING — Attempting to trade for a living without adequate training, accounts for the majority of failures in the industry, so a rigorous training program is the first step for anyone entering the iFT proprietary trading program. New traders first take a 2-day course written by Oliver Velez which covers technical analysis, his techniques, and a set of very specific income-generating trading tactics. They then participate in an intensive 5-day trading lab, where they receive hands-on instruction in the use of a trading platform to put these techniques into real action. By the end of the lab, they are trading in a live market environment.

COACHING SUPPORT — All iFT proprietary traders are provided with continuing mentoring through a combination of ongoing educational sessions and live online chat rooms. These services continue the education process by enabling traders to study and interact with iFT professionals as they analyze and trade the market. Proprietary traders are provided with a fully funded trading account with our preferred trading firm starting at $75,000 and are able to learn from the professional staff online every market day at no additional charge.

RISK MANAGEMENT — Novice traders tend either to have too little capital or risk too much capital too soon in the learning curve, often resulting in early failure. So, iFT arranges full funding for each trader through our preferred trading firm and has developed a closely monitored trader advancement program. The program is designed to increase a trader's lot size and trading capital over time as they demonstrate consistent profitability. At each stage of the process, iFT Risk Managers work with every trader to tightly control their daily capital exposure and risk of loss.

COMMISSIONS — iFT proprietary traders get our preferred trading firm's institutional commission rate, one of the lowest in the industry! Unavailable to retail traders, institutional rates essentially eliminate the negative impact that commissions can have on profitability and greatly accelerates the journey to trading success.

TRADING CAPITAL — Possibly the biggest barrier for most individuals interested in a trading career is access to a large enough capital base to generate a substantial trading income. The iFT proprietary program removes this hurdle by providing traders access to a fully funded account for trading with our preferred trading firm. Traders achieving consistent profitability will continue to have their trading capital increased as they progress through the advancement program, making their earning potential almost unlimited.

LOSSES — Once an aspiring trader has completed the training required to join the preferred trading firm as a professional trader, the preferred trading firm assumes all of the trading risk for the remainder of the learning curve. Proprietary traders are compensated with a percentage of their trading profits, but any losses are absorbed at no risk to the trader.

TUITION REIMBURSEMENT — Once a trader joins our preferred trading firm, 100% of all profits are paid out to the trader until the entire educational fee has been reimbursed. Profit sharing with the trading firm begins after full reimbursement, starting with the trader receiving 80% of all profits and up to 95% at the highest levels.

"You are fantastic tutors and colleagues. I guess I got over the bump in the road I was facing last week. Also, I noticed from my trading log that I am doing well with my trades as well as those from the chat room, which means that I am learning a lot and internalizing those lessons. Thanks again!"

—Michael C.

"Using our decades of experience working with both novice and experienced traders, my staff and I have designed a program to recruit, train and develop our team of professional proprietary traders. While no system can guarantee success in this challenging field, our program has been structured to maximize the odds for a successful trading career by eliminating the most common pitfalls for developing traders."

—Oliver L. Velez

iFT Equity and Forex Program Overview

iFT Master Equity or Master Forex Trader

Master Equity or Forex Program: $10,995 each, using payment plan, or

ONLY $8995.00 each (paid in full, up front)

Combo = Equity & Forex Price ONLY $13,490
(paid in full, up front)

This comprehensive program is comprised of four different phases:

PHASE I - INITIATION — The trader in training takes an intensive Trade for Income™ 7-day course (or combination of iFT's 2-day Trading Seminar and 5-day Live Trading Lab) that covers all the trading strategies that are currently used by iFT Traders to make their livelihood via the markets.

PHASE II - NEOPHYTE — The trader a simulated trading account with which to perfect the tactics, strategies, and execution skills taught in the 7-day Master Trader Program. During this phase the trader is mentored, nurtured, and guided each day via our live online moderated trading room and has a single goal of advancing to level 4 of our Trader Advancement Table. As incentive, training bonuses are awarded to the trader who performs well during this phase.

PHASE III - PROFESSIONAL — Upon graduation from Phase II, the trader is given the option of becoming a funded member of our preferred trading firm. Each trader who opts for this offer will be given access to the firm's account and will receive 100% of all profits until the entire educational fee paid to iFT has been recouped. Once the trader has received full reimbursement for their training fees, the trader and the firm will share in the profits going forward, starting at an 80/20 split in favor of the trader.

PHASE IV - MASTER TRADER — The trader becomes a colony leader of other traders and receives a percentage of their trading profits. As a Master Trader, a colony leader may earn income not only for their own trading efforts, but also on the efforts of other traders under their direct tutelage. The bigger and more profitable the colony is made, the larger will his or her income become. This is the ultimate step in the process towards becoming a professional trader. Colony leadership helps the trader leverage their hard earned skill and catapults the trader into the business side of the trading industry.

RISK CAPITAL — No risk capital is required. Upon graduation of iFT's full training program, you begin trading with $75,000 in buying power, with the ability to earn higher account levels after certain performance goals have been met.

TRADING RATE — iFT proprietary traders get our preferred trading firm's institutional commission rate, one of the lowest in the industry! Unavailable to retail traders, currently, there is no other firm we are aware of in the U.S. who trades at such a low commission rate.

TRADING ACCOUNT — iFT traders can ultimately get unlimited access to our preferred trading firm's capital, but must earn their way to higher levels of exposure. Performance goals are set for each hired iFT Trader at the start of their career with our preferred trading firm.

PAYOUT — Once a trader becomes a professional with our preferred trading firm they start by receiving 100% of all profits earned until the entire education fee has been recouped. After full reimbursement through profits, iFT Master Traders receive 80% payout on all profits and have an opportunity to advance to a 95% payout level.

RETAKES — iFT traders get free retakes of training events free of charge to ensure their success and development towards trading mastery.

PREMIUM SERVICES — iFT Master Traders receive a suite of ongoing daily premium free services including an Online Trading Room which offers iFT traders real-time market analysis and a constant discussion of trading opportunities as they develop live in the market.

iFT Trader Program Advancement Guidelines

Risk Management

At each performance level, traders will be assigned a maximum lot size, a daily loss limit, and a cumulative target.

MAXIMUM SHARE/LOT SIZE — This defines the limit for any individual order as well as the total lot size limit for all open positions.

DAILY LOSS LIMIT — If the Daily Loss Limit is reached at any point during a day's trading, no further entry orders will be permitted and a iFT Risk Manager will work with the trader to close all positions.

WEEKLY LOSS LIMIT — If a cumulative loss greater than double the Daily Loss Limit is reached during a week's trading, the account will be disabled from further trading for the remainder of the week.

CUMULATIVE TARGET — This defines the minimum net profit that must be earned in order to achieve promotion to the next performance level (see respective program table for details).

Trader Advancement

(see table for program details)

In order to advance to the next performance level, a trader must achieve the cumulative profit target.

When a trader has earned the cumulative profit target, an iFT Risk Manager will automatically review their trading records for advancement to the next performance level.

Trader Payout Rates

(see table for program details)

The percentage of profits that are paid to the trader will increase as traders advance through the performance levels. Refer to the table for the following details:

PAYOUT % — This defines the percentage of profits paid to the trader at each performance level for the iFT Master Trader Program.

"This activity we call trading is truly the last bastion of total freedom and independence left. With just a laptop computer and a high speed internet connection, you're literally in business from anywhere in the world. No other activity offers this level of freedom at so low a cost."

—Oliver L. Velez

"Thank you, Oliver, for your note and the continuing support, encouragement, expertise, and depth of your team. I appreciate the innovative series of risks you have undertaken in going beyond educational seminars to fund and mentor traders over the long run. It is a privilege, and I look forward to what I hope will be many happy years together."

— Michael C.

"I am so disappointed that I didn't find you before we signed up with another trading school!!! It cost $16,000 but I got more information out of just one of your DVD's than 6 days of their seminar training! I "Get It" when you teach!! So we invested in your classes. YOU ARE THE BEST!!! Can't wait to start classes!!"

—Sharon and Dave B.

"Actions follow beliefs. Having the right set of beliefs leads to right actions, and right actions in the market lead to big profits. Always remember that your beliefs don't have to be true. They just have to make money!" —Oliver L. Velez

How to Identify a Classic Bottom

Posted by Oliver Velez in the Velez Opportunity Report on 8/9/2010 and is filed under Education

There are several ways by which stocks form key bottoms, but there is only one worthy of being called “classic” and it could not be better displayed than by the chart of Aluminum Company of America (AA) above. Below, I list and detail all the components that make up the “classic” bottom. Armed with this short but powerful list of characteristics, you should forever be able to identify and exploit stocks that are not only bottoming, but those poised to produce huge profitable, long-term advances.

The six components that make up the “classic” bottom are as follows:

- 1) Reverse H&S Formation
- 2) Bull Elephant Proliferation
- 3) Flat 20-ma
- 4) 20-ma Halt
- 5) Rising MACD
- 6) Neckline Break

THE REVERSE H&S FORMATION

The classic bottom, which happens to be the most powerful one of all, takes the shape and form of a reverse head and shoulders pattern. The Head and Shoulders (H&S) pattern essentially comes in two forms: Simple and Complex. The simple version has only one shoulder on each side of the head. In other words, there is only one shoulder on the left and one on the right. The complex form has more than one shoulder on each side of the head. In the chart above, you’ll clearly see that AA’s H&S pattern is of the complex variety, due to the dual shoulders. The complex H&S pattern tends to be the stronger of the two, because it’s broader and takes place over a longer period of time. In general, the more time a bottom takes to form, the more powerful and enduring the advance, once it begins.

BULL ELEPHANT PROLIFERATION

During the course of a steady decline, the vast majority of a stock’s bars will be red and many of those red bars will be healthy and full, which as you know I call Bear Elephant bars. As the momentum to the downside begins to wane and bulls or buyers begin to step up their action, a subtle shift in the size, frequency and nature of the bars will occur. The red bars will tend to gradually become smaller in size and shape, while the stock will begin to display a higher frequency of fuller green bars. These green bars (faint at first) become fuller than the average red bar and after a period of time, the green bars begin to boldly dominate the chart's landscape. I want my wealth traders to be able to identify the initial, subtler changes in the nature of the bars, as this will result in greater opportunities to get in earlier than most. As I continue to point out, when methodically accumulating a bottoming stock with my method, you do not want to wait for the bottom to be complete before you begin. This often leads to the wealth trader not having enough time to get a full position on. Being able to spot the subtle shift in the balance of power by monitoring the nature of the bars, the accumulation process is likely to begin sooner and therefore be much more timely, allowing for a full, gradual but graceful easing in over time.

THE FLAT 20-MA

A bottom cannot be authentic unless it has based long enough to produce a flat or at least flattish 20 period moving average (20-ma). The flatness of the 20-ma is a key sign that the strength of the bears and their downside momentum have run its course. No broad based bottom can occur without this. AA's chart reveals a flat to slightly rising 20-ma at this juncture, which is a key sign that it has now moved into the latter stages of its bottoming process.

THE MACD BULLISH DIVERGENCE

The Moving Average Convergence Divergence, or MACD, which is typically pronounced "Mack-Dee", is a technical indicator that was developed by Gerald Appel, a famous market technician who was very helpful to me during my formative years as a burgeoning technical trader. It is customarily used by traders to determine when to buy or sell a security, based on the interaction between a line constructed from two moving averages and a "trigger line." However, I rarely use it this way and only pay credence to the divergence indications it signals. The MACD Bullish Divergence is a powerful sign that the stock is in the midst of transitioning from a bear to a bull. Here is how it works.

MACD DIVERGENCE EXAMPLE

When a stock makes a lower low, while the MACD is simultaneously making a higher low, it is called a bullish divergence. This event can indicate that while the stock has clearly headed lower, internally it is actually stronger than the picture or chart is currently revealing. Buying into a bullish bar at or near the new low, during a bullish MACD convergence makes for a powerful "wealth entry" in my view. While I did not get an opportunity to do that with AA, its chart shows a clear MACD bullish divergence when it formed the head part of its Reverse H&S formation. When the head was being formed at lower prices, the MACD was much higher than the prior low that corresponded to the most recent left shoulder. Had a strong Bottoming Tail or Bull Elephant bar formed at the head during this bullish divergence, I would have added quite heavily. It did not. So I did not.

THE NECKLINE BREAK

The final sign that the bottom is a thing of the past and the stock has begun its upward ascent in earnest is the break above the neckline formed by the left and right shoulder(s). When this breakout event occurs, there should be no doubt that new lows will not be seen for a long while. At this point, the wealth trader's "line" or almost full lot size should have already been accumulated. While the neckline break is not necessarily an actionable event, it can be if a single bullish bar accomplishes it. We have not as yet had a true convincing neckline line break in AA, but its close. Perhaps we'll see one in the next week or so.

These are the main characteristics that make up the most powerful bottom in existence, the classic bottom. Remember them. Practice spotting them and you'll never miss the beginning of a major advance again.

Read and reread the points above three to five times. The full and complete understanding will help you master one of the most potent signs of a playable reversal. I have traders who earn their entire livelihoods from their use. They rely on nothing else.
